The ultimate Belgrade kafana guide. Srđan Garoević. Lonely Planet Writer. 25 January 2019. When the Ottomans conquered Belgrade in 1521, they brought coffee to the city and established its first kafana – a traditional tavern or coffee house. Hundreds of kafanas dot the city to this day, and for the past half-millennium they have served as more than just places to get decent grub and drinks from the early mornings to late nights.

Serbia's largest national park (636 sq km) is also one of its most dramatic, with arresting attractions both natural and human-made. The astounding Iron Gates gorge (erdapska klisura) is the park's main draw; its formidable cliffs – some of which soar over 500m – dip and dive for 100km along the Danube to form a natural border with Romania.
