1. The definition and clinical diagnosis of stuttering are not the same. However, arriving at a clinical diagnosis often involves use of specifications of, e.g., the frequency, of the parameters found in the definition of the disorder. 2. One reason why definitions of stuttering differ is that some of them are based entirely, or Stuttering runs in families, and this is true of the type of stuttering (persistent and recovered). Genetics plays a role in developmental stuttering, but environmental factors are also important influences in whether or not stuttering will occur. Quite likely, persistency requires additional genetic factors.
